CIRCULAR CINEMA

THE 100 DAYS of the Battle OF NORMANDY

The images projected on nine screens are sourced from British, Canadian, German, American and French archival footage.

On both sides of the Channel, one was preparing for this long-awaited moment. Then, in spite of unfavorable weather conditions, came the morning of June 6, 1944, the first step towards the liberation of Western Europe. From the landings on the 5 beaches of the Manche and Calvados departments to the tragic bombing of Le Havre on September 12, the Battle of Normandy lasted 100 days. Experience 20 minutes of pure historical intensity!

To improve the visitor experience, our reception area has been fully redesigned: maps, the chronology and the outcome of the Battle of Normandy are on view as well as several British military artifacts from the Caen Mémorial collection are also on display.
